POETRY.

For the Boston Morning Post.
MAD MOMENTS.

The day hath closed—yet not in light
And golden clouds the sun went down;
Not, as when gloriously bright,
Its splendor gilds a crimsoned town.
I have not been to church—the priest
Missed a devoted worshipper;
The parson's daughter—but I pause—
'Tis sin in me to speak of her.
And yet the curls of golden hair
That o'er her sunny forehead shine,
A neck not quite encased, nor bare,
An eye whose upward looks divine,
A sweet and plaintive voice whose tone
Responsive chides the organ's swell,
Are so like her's fate made my own,
'Twere not adultery to dwell
Upon the magic of her cheek,
Not wrong to clasp her lily fingers,
Or crumpling with a blush the neck
Yielding face on which my memory lingers.
Oh! chide me not, if unto Pan
My thoughts in service time are given,
Since thus I follow, reverend man,
Thine own advice—and think—of Heaven!

Away with thoughts like these! my mind
Is free now—the image gone—
And in my easy chair reclined,
I seem—a new Napoleon.
Bring me Vanban!—the trench, the moat,
The bastion, and the covered way,
The citadel not far remote,
The battery that wins the day,
The calculation slow, but sure,
The point blank shots fatality,
The mind that does and dares endure—
Shall make me, Consul, rival thee.

Some more champagne! The cork is drawn,
Be careful that again it fills—
"Another Jena yet shall dawn!"
For me, "another Austerlitz."
Vain visions! glory's sun is set—
No more, it proudly shines
On Stambol's every minaret,
On Italy's green vines.
Banners are rent, and lances lain
Low levelled, in the dust,
Blood has but fertilized the plain
And dimmed the blade with rust.
The helmet that at Waterloo
Prest on a brow divine,
Clings to the dust, as if it grew
Companion to the vine.
Wouldst be a victor? if for thee
There dawn an Austerlitz,
The fate of him who conquered, see—
St Helena exists.

The night wears on—I'll sleep—I'll sleep—
But not like Richard in his tent—
No ghastly disturb my slumber deep,
The morrow brings no great event.
But come what may—it cannot shake
A heart by fate already tried—
A heart that will not bend, nor break,
But proudly stem the swelling tide.

PETERSHAM.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

In the debate in the House of Representatives, Feb. 28, on the resolves relating to the Bank of the United States, Mr. Robinson, of Marblehead, said, that he had not intended to address the House on this subject until now, because it seemed to him yesterday, that the House was anxious of coming to the question without any further debate. But as there now seemed to be a disposition to go on with the discussion, he would offer a few remarks. He did not intend, however, to go deep into the subject, or long to detain the attention of the House. But he was desirous that the brevity of his speech on this subject should be attributed to his benevolence, to his regard for the feelings of others, and by no means to his stupidity, but by no means to a want of materials for making a long speech on this subject. For however brief he might be compelled to be on every other subject, for the want of ideas, he would not allow such to be the case on this occasion. For the subject now under consideration, has been the all-absorbing topic of conversation, of debate, of newspaper controversy, for months; so that there can be no member in this House, who can be wanting materials for a speech, and every member here could, if he pleased, inflict upon the House a day's speech on this subject, and in this way, following the example of members of Congress, continue the session during the summer. But what would be the use of all this copious waste of words? Nothing new would be elicited on the subject, and probably no vote in the House would be changed. The subject has been presented in every shape and in every light of which it is capable. Our members of Congress have been engaged on this subject almost exclusively for months, to the neglect of almost all other business; and we have their speeches in our hands, of all lengths, made by men of the greatest talent, genius and cunning, made upon the spot, having all the facts and evidence before them, so that it ought not to be presumed, that any one can be wanting materials for making a speech on this subject. And I therefore claim, said Mr. R. that my brevity on this occasion shall be charged to my benevolence. Because, if I were wicked enough to do it, I might take either the speech of Mr. Clay, of Mr. Binney, of Mr. Webster, or rather Mr. Webster's speech, in the shape of a report, or the speech of Mr. Wright, of Mr. Rives, of Mr. Benton, and deliver a speech on either side of this subject, much better than I myself could manufacture, and equal, perhaps, to any which has been made in this House. But he said he was a kind of a utilitarian—he hated to waste his strength, and spend his breath in vain. For although he might now take from his drawer the speech of Mr. Benton, which some member of Congress had the kindness to send him, and read as forcible, and as eloquent an argument in proof of the corruptions, and dangerous tendency of the U. S. Bank, as ever has been or can be made, yet he did not suppose it would alter the mind of any one. If, then, neither the eloquence of Clay, Webster, Binney and others, on the one side, nor of Wright, Rives, Benton, &c. on the other, can alter the opinions of any, how conceited it would seem in him, to attempt to do it. And even the best which he could say would be but a feeble echo of what has been said, and often reiterated, in Congress. And what we are now doing after all, is but a fac simile, a miniature representation of what has long been, and is now doing there. He said, that he believed there are now, and always have been, two great political parties in this country—a party in favor of wealth and power, and a party in favor of the equal right and liberties of the people. And whatever has been said, or may be said, about the concentration of power in the hands of one man, he believed that the President was in favor of the equality, the interests, the rights and liberties of the whole people, and that it is the U. S. Bank, and the U. S. Bank party, that are in favor of the concentration of power and wealth—and the President, in his measures against the U. S. Bank, has been influenced by his feelings of attachment to the equal rights of man, and his hostility to this concentration of wealth and power, by great monied monopolies. He knows, and we all know, that as the few contrive means to obtain wealth and power, the many verge towards pauperism and slavery—that liberty cannot exist in a nation where a great monied combination becomes one of the permanent institutions of the country. The people have rightly appreciated the motives of the President, in his measures against this Bank. They feel that he has been willing to jeopardize his popularity, and expose himself to abuse, insult, threats, and every evil which the power of wealth could heap upon him, in order to protect them and their children for ever, from the corruptions and power of a monied aristocracy.

And the people have shown, that they in this way appreciate his motives, by his re-election to the Presidency by the most overwhelming majority that has ever been in this wide extended country, of such diversity of interests and difference of opinion in relation to every thing else. And the case stands now as it did before the election. It was then bank or no bank, and it is now bank or no bank, and who dares to say that the people have not expressed their opinion against the Bank. But the President has taken the responsibility and removed the deposits, and, say the resolves, has added another to the many proofs of an attempt to concentrate all possible power in the hands of one individual. The President has taken the responsibility, and, says Mr. Clay, thus assumes both the sword and the purse, and this idea has been reiterated here in this House. But how does it follow, that by removing the deposits, even if he had removed them, which is not literally the fact, that he has assumed the sword and the purse? Does the power of saying in what vault the public purse shall be placed necessarily give the Executive the ownership of the purse? Can the President expend the public money in one bank more than in another? Can he control the expenditure of a dollar, now, more than he could previous to his assumption of "the responsibility"? A disposition to dwell on this point, would but argue a distrust of the intelligence of the House. It is not the President that has assumed the sword and the purse. It is the Bank, that having the purse, wants the sword. But what is the most lamentable, the most astonishing, its advocates here and every where, are willing to gratify this desire in the Bank. They seem to think the Bank has the right to hold both the purse and the sword, has a right to exist, which is the same thing as a right to hold the sword. Let the Bank be re-chartered, and long before the end of another twenty years, no one will dispute as to the place of deposit, both of the purse and the sword, and no man would dare to attempt to remove the deposits. And yet its advocates here and every where, think that this great engine of power and wealth, corruption and slavery, ought not to be destroyed, nor even suffered to die a natural death. They contend that it has a right to exist, that the decision of the Supreme Court has made it constitutional, or rather, one would suppose, from the reasoning of the gentleman from Salem, (Mr. Saltonstall) has made it a part of the Constitution, if not superior to the Constitution. For he contends, that by this decision its constitutionality is settled, and the President has no right to prevent its re-charter, and by doing so, it is in his mind proof positive that the President is laboring to concentrate all possible power in his hands, and is changing the government into a monarchy. The advocates of the Bank have every where contended, that by this decision of the President, the government and the people are precluded, that the Bank monopoly is a vested right, that nobody can touch it, that it is an astonishing assumption of power for the President, on this subject, to claim to understand the Constitution for himself. To such dangerous extremes would the Bank party among us extend the power of the Judiciary, giving it a power not only superior to the Executive, and Legislative departments, not only superior to the Law, but to the Constitution; and yet this party, by the power of wealth, concentrated wealth, monopolies, have now obtained an ascendancy in old patriotic Massachusetts. And they even contend, that whoever opposes this monstrous doctrine, the President, the government, or the people, are trying to array the poor against the rich, and are desirous of reacting here in this country, all the horrors of the French Revolution. But, is it so, Mr. Speaker? Who does see this subject in its true light? Who does not see that if the United States Bank now, after all that has been done, now, while in open warfare with the government and the people, in open warfare with both the Executive and Legislative branches of the government, (for both are opposed to the Bank) and the smaller branch of the Legislature would be strongly opposed, if other members would follow the magnanimous and truly democratic course of Mr. Senator Rives; if the Bank now, while in open warfare with the government and people, should come off victorious, who will ever hereafter dare to say that its existence shall not be eternal, that its power shall not be omnipotent?

It Gen. Jackson, a man more firmly seated in the affections of the people of this great country than any other man can ever expect to be, a man of great powers of mind, integrity of character and firmness of purpose, supported by his great popularity and weight of character,—if Gen. Jackson cannot withstand the power of this great monied monopoly, who ever hereafter will be able to oppose its power? Who ever hereafter will dare to excite its wrath? Who ever hereafter will be so foolish as to aspire to the office of President, or any other high station, without first conciliating the favor of the U. S. Bank. He should as soon think of praying, not for "pestilence and famine," but for something worse, for chains and slavery, for manacles, as for the continued existence of this great monied aristocracy. But he said, he had nothing to fear on this account. Such would not be the result. The people are opposed to monied aristocracies, and we are safe. The good sense of the people lead them to prefer to endure patiently every evil which the Bank can inflict upon them, rather than to sacrifice themselves and their children forever, to the corruptions and slavery, which its continued existence could not fail to produce.

The power of concentrated wealth is much to be feared. Few of us perhaps there are, who have not felt how difficult it is to maintain their equal rights, freedom of feeling, and independence of character, even among individuals possessed of great wealth. There are few, perhaps, who have not felt and acknowledged the superior wisdom of their rich neighbor, whose whole knowledge was deposited in his pocket—few who have not felt themselves humbled in the presence of a blockhead, whose whole virtue was cash.—And when we see that wealth, in the hands of unconnected individuals, obtains too much influence among us, ought we not to be careful rather to prevent its union, than to afford facilities for bringing it together so that its whole power may be concentrated to a focus? If the U. S. Bank is suffered to exist, and becomes one of our permanent institutions, what is to protect us from its power, the superciliousness and pride of its stockholders? What is to protect us from the corrupting influences of its gold? Do we rely on our own integrity, on our capacity of resisting temptation? A great monied aristocracy will involve itself with all the affairs of life, with all the means of education, and all the institutions of government. It will operate upon our opinions, conduct and characters, without our knowledge, moulding our population to its will. Do we suppose that our members of Congress now, who are interested in the U. S. Bank, who own its stock, or who are in its debt, or whose fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, children, wives, whose dearest friends are interested in the bank—do we suppose that such men can act on the subject now before them, as disinterestedly as though they were in no way interested, either by themselves or their friends? If we think so, we are strangely ignorant of the nature of man. And when we are told by the advocates of the bank here, of great men, who were formerly opposed to the bank, changing their opinions in its favor, have we no reason to suspect, that their minds may have been operated upon by the potent energy of golden arguments? The people are everywhere opposed to the U. S. Bank. Such is the almost universal opinion of the danger of such an institution, that there never was any great political subject in this country, in which the people were so unanimous, as they are in their support of the President, in his measures against this mammoth institution. And this feeling of opposition to the bank is daily increasing. The people have lately been made to feel its power. But instead of being subdued and humbled by the punishment inflicted, it has only aroused them with a determined energy to destroy the instrument, which has the power of inflicting the pain. Where are the States in this Union, which have expressed an opinion in favor of the bank? Virginia has again and again been alluded to. But what says Virginia? She reiterates in still stronger language than ever, her determined opposition to the U. S. Bank, on account of its unconstitutionality, and only opposes the removal of the deposits. How then can gentlemen congratulate themselves upon being with old Virginia in these resolves? Old Virginia is opposed to the U. S. Bank, and "bank or no bank that's the question," or constitution or no constitution, if the gentleman like this better, because if the bank lives the constitution dies, and our rights and liberties die with it, and we become the supple slaves of a great monied aristocracy. But the people are opposed to a monied aristocracy, and we are safe, and our little ones, now in the cradle, we may rear to manhood with the hope and expectation of transmitting to them all our rights and liberties improved perhaps, at least not impaired, in our hands. New York, New Jersey, Maine, and Ohio have already expressed their hostility to the bank. The people are everywhere opening their eyes to the corrupting influences and dangerous tendencies of this institution. Even in this State, where all admit the force of the monied aristocracy is the most concentrated, even here, I do not doubt but that a majority of the people are opposed to the bank. But the people seldom express their opinions except at the polls.—They are obliged to be employed continually to support themselves and their employers, to labour every hour which nature requires not for repose to get food and clothing and shelter for themselves and families. They are without banks, without monopolies, without printing presses, they have never learned to make speeches, they make but little noise in the community. Were it not, that we find them necessary to our support, we should hardly know that they exist around us. But the few, the rich, the owners of banks, of insurance monopolies, of turnpike, bridge, canal, railroad and manufacturing monopolies, the professional men, the capitalists, the idlers, who have been to colleges and learned to make long speeches, although a very small minority, they make so much noise in the world that we are often deceived, as to the real state of popular opinion. And the legislature has in this way often been deceived, and being in this way deceived, has passed resolves before, and some, which their successors were ashamed of, and obliged to obliterate. And would it not be well for us to draw lessons of wisdom from the folly of our predecessors? For who knows, but that before the end of the existence of the present charter of the U. S. bank, our successors may be ashamed of what we are now about to do, ashamed that, instead of strengthening the hands of our government, in opposing an overbearing monied aristocracy, we have done whatever we could to fix upon ourselves and our posterity forever, an institution, which is daily absorbing the substance and encroaching upon the rights of the people.

MR ROBINSON'S SPEECH upon the Resolutions relative to the Bank of the U. S. will be found upon the first page.

The Democracy of Philadelphia in motion.—The Pennsylvania of Monday, publishes a call for a "General Town Meeting of the Democratic citizens of the city and county of Philadelphia, to sustain the Administration in all its measures in regard to the Bank of the United States," signed by nearly THREE THOUSAND CITIZENS, and adds, "TWO THOUSAND additional names are now in our possession, and will be published in our next." There will, probably, before the meeting, be TEN THOUSAND SIGNATURES. A desire has been expressed to see the anti-Bank party—it may be gratified to-morrow.

The National Republicans in Essex North have appointed a Convention, to be held at Andover, during the present week, for the purpose of getting up "instructions" for the Representative in Congress from that District, Mr Osgood; this Convention, for the sake of effect, is called "without distinction of party"—but will be attended by the "Silver Greys," alone. The majority who elected Mr Osgood, knew what his sentiments were at that time, and agree with him now, in every respect, as to the course he has pursued, and the votes he has given, since his election. The votes which elected him were the best "instructions" he could receive—and he has faithfully and honestly followed them. This Andover farce is the work of those who always opposed his election—and who now, when opposition is useless, would swerve him from his duty, and make him an instrument for the destruction of his friends. The gentlemen may as well save their time and their money—their remonstrances against his election, were unavailable—and their "instructions" as to the execution of a trust which they endeavored to deprive him of, will be equally so. He was elected as a friend of the President, and an opponent of the Bank, and in both those stations, he has fulfilled his duty with honorable fidelity.

Bank Petitions.—Congress, in the expiring struggles of the old British Bank, was inundated as Congress is now, by petitions from the Bank partisans. But there were very few counter petitions. The great mass of the people opposed to the mammoth monopoly shewed their opinions against the bank, as the great mass of the people do now, at the ballot box.—When the people have elected, as they now have, to the House of Representatives, a decided majority against the Bank—when they have elected and instructed, as they have now, a majority of the Senate to act against the Bank—when they have elected, as they did at the last Presidential election, a President and Vice President decidedly opposed to the Bank—when the great mass of the people have done all these things—the will of the people, the supreme law in a republican government, has been declared in the most expressive and effectual manner, and that will must and will be obeyed. The President put the veto of death upon the Hydra, and the people have sanctioned that veto by two hundred and nineteen, out of two hundred and eighty eight electoral votes. President Bidle and his Bank troops with abusive petitions, will not be found so strong as PRESIDENT JACKSON, and the people who re-elected the Hero of New Orleans to overturn this BRITISH BANK, more dangerous to the liberties of this people than the BRITISH ARMY, which he overthrew on the GLORIOUS FIELD OF ORLEANS.

The Kentucky Reporter, Mr Clay's paper, has the following very pertinent remarks:—

"But when an individual abandons the weak and powerless, and at the same time all the principles by which his political life has been remarked, and unites himself with those who have favors to bestow, a stain will rest upon him and his motives, which a long life of good deeds will be insufficient to efface."

When it is remembered that Mr Clay deserted the Democratic party in 1824-5, a period of its greatest weakness, abandoned "all the principles by which his political life had been marked," and united himself to his enemies, because "they had favors to bestow," the above remarks will be considered a most cutting, but deserved rebuke.

There were more memorials to Congress in favor of the "poor Indians" than there are in favor of the "distress" Bank—the steam was raised a good deal higher than, now. Then the names leaped from the very tombstones to the memorials, and yet Congress was deaf to the voice from the grave-yard. The Bank "fac simile" memorials will not meet any better success.

An Arch. politician on one of the wharves hoisted his flag at half-mast on the 4th inst. The flag upon the Tremont Theatre did not reach the top of the pole, but the Manager says that it was owing to the negligence of the carpenter—no design. Some of the Nationals threatened to burn the President in effigy, upon the Common, in the evening, but finally concluded that it wasn't worth while. Guess it wouldn't done any good.

There is not much fun going on just now—theatres rather sleepy—Maj. Stevens has left the Museum, and not a single menagerie can be found within the precincts of the city. A Bachelors' Ball has been in contemplation, but it is whispered that it will be abandoned on account of the removal of the Deposites. The ladies like this very well, and talk of making up a purse—selves, to defray the expenses, and if necessary, pumps and gloves for the "distressed" gentlemen.

The opposition papers complain that their members of Congress are gallanting ladies up and down Pennsylvania Avenue, when they should be attending to their public duties.

The following (says the Albany Argus) comes from a paper friendly to the Bank. The wanton course of that great Monopoly, and its power and disposition to produce mischief and ruin to accomplish its designs against the government, will sooner or later open the eyes of every man who loves his country, whatever may have been his past predilections.

From the St. Louis, (Missouri) Republican of Feb. 10.

Bank of the U. States.—We have been, and still are, the fast friends of this institution. But when we see it adopting a course fraught with distress and ruin to our community, we shall not hesitate to condemn it. The recent order from the parent Bank, requiring a further curtailment of discounts for the next 50 days, at a rate not much less than thirty per cent. is unprecedented in the annals of this bank, and must, if persevered in by the local directors, be the cause of serious inconvenience and sacrifice of property. In less than a year the branch here has curtailed its discounts almost one half—from nearly $800,000 to $450,000—and at the present rate of curtailment, the entire debt will be cancelled in less than fifteen months more. We have looked in vain for a reason for this injurious curtailment. The bank may have, in the declared hostility of the General Government to the institution, good and substantial reasons for arming itself at all points. It may have come to its knowledge, as other facts of this kind have been made known to it, that other and more deadly acts are meditated by the Administration against it. We do not doubt that some such reasons have operated to produce the precautionary act in question. Nevertheless, it is most injurious in its consequences, and scarcely justifiable in any event.

An acknowledgment from the enemy.—The Philadelphia Commercial Intelligencer, of Monday, contains the following candid confession:—

Business.—The season of business has returned, and business has returned with it in despite of the deposite question. We are told by our friends in Market street, that the purchases made are nearly as large as last year, and that payments thus far have been quite as punctual. The appearance of the street is quite lively and cheering.

A Cat wanted.—An active and industrious cat may hear of a good situation by applying at this office. She must come well recommended as a good rat-catcher, and she must not be above catching a mouse sometimes, when occasion may require. Good testimonials of character and qualifications will be demanded. Central Courant.

We recommend the members of the Young Men's "distress" Committee, of this city, as well qualified for the above office—they are royal mousers.

People should keep cool and good natured. now-a-days—there is a little too much of the snapping turtle manifested occasionally. A gentleman writes us that we are "a d—d fool," and taxes us a cent for the information, without letting us know to whom we are indebted for the flattering intelligence. We have no objection to the contents of such epistles, but dislike the endorsement of that long red figure one, which those rascally Post Office clerks clap on the back of them.

The factory girls at Dover, (N. H.) have held a meeting, and resolved not to concur in the proposed reduction of their wages. The proprietors and the operatives must appoint a Committee of Conference, or the bill will be lost between the two houses.

We learn from the Harrisburg Pa. Chronicle, that $25,000, the balance of the $300,000 State loan, has been taken by the Girard Bank.

There was a large fire at Brooklyn, (N. Y.) on Tuesday, which destroyed twelve or fifteen stores and dwelling houses, and a large amount of other property.

Of all the dingy, dirty looking, stupid papers that we receive from the various places in this wide spread republic, the Savannah Republican is the worst.

Mr Power's engagement is drawing to a close, and all who have not seen his inimitable personation of Irish character, are advised to profit by the present opportunity. This evening, he makes his last appearance, save one.

A fellow feeling.—The editor of the Atlas has turned his attention to the management of calves.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT.

By and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

John W. Smith, Surveyor and Inspector at Portland, Me.

William Beach, Collector at Gloucester, Mass.

Martin T. Morton, Collector and Inspector at Nantucket, Mass.

The above are re-appointments.

Serious Affair.—Last night, about 6 o'clock a man from South Boston, in a state of intoxication, was followed in Sea street by a levy of boys, and becoming irritated by their annoyance, seized a brick from the street, and threw it among them, which struck a boy about nine years of age, by the name of David Drahnen, on the forehead, and broke his skull in a dreadful manner. Medical aid was called, but little hope is entertained of his recovery.—Transcript.

Authorship of Junius.—The last advices from Europe, bring intelligence of the death of Lord Grenville, in the 75th year of his age. It is consistently asserted and believed, that the secret of the authorship of Junius, will now be developed, as a nobleman, a relative of Lord Grenville, has been heard repeatedly to declare that the secret was in his kinsman's keeping, and would be disclosed at his death.—Mer. Jour.

The National Republicans have got sick and tired of that name, which is identified in their minds with the recollection of many defeats. They now call themselves "Independent Republicans."

The Congressional Committee of Ways and Means may be expected to present their Report within a day or two. It is looked for with impatient interest, and will be an important document.

An officer in the Potomac writes from the Bay of Callao, on the 17th Nov. that the ship would leave for Boston in January, 1834.—Transcript.

In the Senate, March 5.—Petitions of N. Blake and others, in aid of petition of Wm. Vans—of S. Ewer and others for Saving's Bank in Nantucket.

In the House, Petition of the People's Bank in Roxbury, for reduction of capital—Remonstrances of E. Clapp and others, against petition of T. Hewins and others—several petitions on the License laws. Turnpike—to establish Fire Department in Lowell—to incorporate Proprietors of Middlesex Bridge—the Pocasset Iron Company—the Boston and Bangor Steam Boat Company—the Davis Manufacturing Company—the Nickawagg Manufacturing Company—severally passed to be enacted.—Adjourned.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

By the Henry IV. Captain Castoff, from Havre, whence she sailed on the 30th Jan. we have our regular files. The papers do not contain anything of political moment.—N. Y. Gaz.

The Gazette de France says, it is reported that the immediate recall of M. de Rayneval from Spain, was decided upon at the last Council, in consequence of his having aided in the removal of M. Zen, without first having informed the French Government of his intentions.

The King of Denmark has sent a very kind and friendly answer to the letter of the Queen Regent, communicating to his majesty the death of Ferdinand VII., and the accession of Donna Isabella to the throne.

The Augsburg Gazette of the 21st says—"In order to improve the trade of East and West Prussia, which has suffered considerably from the exclusive system of Russia, our Government has endeavored to form a commercial treaty with that power."

Portugal.—News was received in London on the 27th Jan. that Gen Saldanha had entered Leira, capturing the whole of the usurper's forces in that place.

The Pedreiros have gained an advantage also at Marvao; and, according to all these accounts, the Miguelites cannot possibly long hold out. Miguel is said to be very ill.

There is a rumor from Madrid, not, however, much to be credited, that the new Spanish Cabinet intends to compass the expulsion from Portugal both of Don Pedro and Don Miguel.

Great Britain.—The King was expected to open the approaching session of parliament in person.

Postscript to a letter from the French Admiral Baron Hugon commanding the French squadron in the Levant, by which he announces to the minister of Marine the loss of the French ship of the line Le Superbe.

"P. S. I open my letter to announce that the Cornelie has just been despatched. I have also just learnt that the American ship the United States, Commodore Patterson, which left the bay of Smyrna a few hours before the Superbe, after having lost some of her masts, had her sails torn away, and her boats carried off; and being nearly embayed off the coast of Andros, and expecting every moment to be lost, a sudden gleam of light enabled her to discover the narrow passage between Tina and Andros, she was enabled to get through it and gain the harbor of Milo."

Foreign Miscellany.

A Cheshire auctioneer, while engaged in his vocation the other day, thus exalted the merits of a carpet—"Gentlemen and ladies, some folks sell carpets for Brussels which are not Brussels, but I can most positively assure you that this elegant article was made by Mr Brussels himself."

A man of uncommonly grotesque countenance, boasted of having received his infant heirs first smile. A friend observed it was not wonderful the child should only smile, when no one else could look without laughter!

A Cockney's Tour, or William Vite's Journey into Wales.—William Vite was a vatchmaker in Vater Lane; William Vite, his wife Vennefred, and his son Valter, vent one day in a viskey to Wales, and as they went along by the river Vye, a wicked easterly vind viped off William Vite's vis, into the vater. William Vite said to his son Valter, vip out of the viskey, and vip into the Vye, and vip out my vis; so William Vite's son Valter, vipped out of the viskey, and vipped into the Vye, and vipped out William Vite's vis; so Vite his wife Vennefred, and his son Valter, vent vip, vip, vip, all the way into Wales.

A curious circumstance occurred a day or two ago in the Royal Military Asylum.—The Rev Mr Clarke, the chaplain, had a catalogue of the exhibition of the Royal Academy, which had been lent to the adjutant, Captain Lugard. Mr Lawrence the assistant surgeon, intending to go to the exhibition, sent to borrow Mr Clarke's catalogue. Mr Clark, who was much occupied at the time, hastily wrote upon a slip of paper, "Let Mr L. have Exhib. Cat." Captain and Mrs Lugard were both from home; and Miss Lugard knowing nothing of the catalogue, thought Mr Lawrence wanted one of their cats. A kitten of theirs had died a few days before, which Miss Lugard much regretted; but she had the old cat caught and put into a bag, and sent to Mr Lawrence. The gentleman's astonishment may be conceived when his servant brought him a bag with a cat in it.

Foreign Theatrical Chat.

Mrs Hodges, late Miss Nelson, of Covent Garden Theatre, who made a successful debut about three years since as Peggy in the Country Girl, left London, on Tuesday, with her husband, for Liverpool. They are on their way to the Park Theatre, New York, where they are engaged for twelve months.—London Court Journal.

The weekly receipts at Covent Garden Theatre, since the production of Gustavus, amount to upwards of £2,500, the largest ever known before Christmas. The grand scene in this opera, including chandeliers, lustres, branches, &c., cost nearly £1,300. In the masquerade scene it is no uncommon thing to see a dozen noble lords figuring away nightly.

A new piece has been brought out at Paris, in which a certain distinguished diplomat appears; the dress, and peculiar mode of wearing the hair, are exactly copied. The extreme tragical manner of the diplomat, and immobile expression of his countenance, are faithfully represented; and while he subjects governments and states, he appears perfectly innocent, and declares he knows nothing of what is going on, though, by some happy accident, he benefits by every change.

The Hon. Jonas Platt, whose death is noticed in this day's paper, was a man long known and distinguished in our State. He was an able lawyer, an eloquent member of our State Senate and of the House of Representatives of the United States, and a learned, sound and upright Judge.—N. Y. Stand.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr Editor—Curiosity prompted me to be present for a short time, on Thursday evening, to witness the proceedings at the Young Men's meeting on the subject of the "public distress." When I entered, a Mr Sargent, as I understood, was speaking in support of a set of resolutions which had been submitted, based on "Executive Usurpations." The Speaker, although severe in many of his remarks, was gentlemanly withal, and really acquitted himself, as a declaimer, (for argument with all was out of the question,) in a creditable manner. Next to Mr Sargent succeeded Mr George William Gordon, (yes, that is the name;—I like to be particular, Mr Editor, for the gentleman himself is very particular always to write George William Gordon), next to Mr Sargent, I say, to claim the floor, was Mr George William Gordon, and I must do this personage the justice to say that he was more lavish in the use of the low vulgar slang of the day, against the venerable Chief Magistrate of the nation, than any other individual who addressed the meeting. This gentleman said something about the Scriptures, and you know, Mr Editor, they strongly impute respect and submission toward the powers that be.

The Scriptures informed us that the children of Israel, in the absence of Moses, set up a Golden Calf, as an object of worship, and this had been likened by the President to the Bank and its supporters. But he, Mr Gordon, had read the American Scriptures, and he there learnt that the people of the United States had set up a Brazen Image in the person of Andrew Jackson. After several other remarks of the like tenor, the gentleman said in conclusion, perhaps some would think it would be useless to attempt to do any thing by way of petition or memorial, to stop the President in his mad career. Not so, Mr Gordon. He thought it would have a good effect, and he for one should most heartily rejoice if it should have the least tendency towards peopling the deserts of Arabia! The pious allusion in the concluding part of this sentence, as you are probably aware, Mr Editor, is to a declaration which the opposition have manufactured and put into the mouth of the President, that if the Deposites should be restored by a two thirds majority, he would flee to the deserts of Arabia!

The Jack Downing Prints, which it would seem constitute the American Scriptures of George William Gordon, to the exclusion of those which testify of Him whose disciple he professes to be, abound with passages of a like pious character, and which contrast admirably with those exploded precepts of "do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you;—love your enemies;—do good unto those who despitefully use and persecute you," &c. &c. A LOOKER-ON.

TRADES UNION.

At a meeting of the MASONS, held agreeably to previous notice, at Bascom's Hotel, on Monday evening, 3d inst. the following business was transacted:—

The meeting was organized by calling Mr DUNBAR B. HARRIS to the Chair, and appointing Mr JOHN TURNER, Secretary. The objects of the meeting were stated by the Chairman and others, after which the following resolutions, after being eloquently supported by a number of gentlemen, were adopted:—

Resolved, That unless the Working-men of this country feel the importance of taking active and efficient measures for the preservation of their rights, and the general improvement of their civil and political circumstances, there is every reason to apprehend that their condition will be eventually as deplorable as is the condition of the laboring people of Europe.

Resolved, That the formation of a Trades Union, among the different branches of Mechanical employment, is one of the most efficient means of preserving the rights and advancing the interests of the Manual Laborers of this country.

Resolved, That it is expedient to form a Trades Union, for this city and vicinity, and that two Delegates be appointed by this meeting to meet in convention with Delegates from other trades for the purpose of carrying this resolution into immediate effect.

On motion, it was

Voted, That we now proceed to the choice of Delegates to represent the Masons in the said Convention. Messrs DUNBAR B. HARRIS and SMITH NICHOLS were chosen.

On motion, it was

Voted, That when this meeting adjourns, it adjourn to meet at the Old Common Council Room, on Monday, the 17th inst. at 7 o'clock, P. M.

On motion, it was

Voted, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the Chairman and Secretary, and published in the New England Artisan, and the Boston Morning Post.

On motion, it was

Voted, To adjourn.

DUNBAR B. HARRIS, Chairman.

JOHN TURNER, Secretary.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr Greene—Your paper of Monday contains an article which holds up "a poor Irishman" to public scorn, as an arrant cheat. It states that the said personage had procured a place for a "poor Irishman," took his last dollar from him, and then sent him, to use your own elegant language, "on a 'pigeon milk' errand, first up to the 'corner of Washington street, South-end,' and then down on Central wharf." Now, sir, it is well known that I am the only keeper of an intelligence office in Federal street, and I therefore request you to publish the real state of facts, which some cause, probably false information, has led you to pervert to the injury of my character.

It is not true that I engaged to get the "poor Irishman" a place. I never engaged to get any person a place. I never received a fee on any such condition. The man who comes to me with a fee, pays it, not for insurance of getting a place, but for the use of my office during a stated period—that is, for such information as I can give him. No person can pretend that he does not understand the agreement, because it is my invariable practice to take the signatures of applicants to the following words, "I hereby agree to pay to A. Dow, one dollar for information for two weeks." The sign manual of your "poor Irishman," may be seen on my books, to this formula, which I uniformly explain to those who cannot read. If there is anything unfair in this practice, there are some who do not furnish information on as reasonable terms as I do.

The case of your "poor Irishman" was this: A gentleman at the South-end applied to me for a man, and I sent him this Irishman. The gentleman may have told him that he did not want a man—nothing more likely. Possibly he did not like the fellow's appearance. And I am responsible for what the gentleman told him? I have ascertained by inquiry that the gentleman is still in want of a man.

Your Irishman, on being disappointed, curses me, as many do in like circumstances, and runs to the Police Court to complain. Had he any reason to do so? I have thought it due to my own character thus to refute the calumnies which have misled you, and am, with respect, yours, A. DOW.
